THE EARLY NAVIGATORS

HENRY HUDSON

The illustration shows Hudson's 'Half Moon', in which he explored the North-West Passage attempting to reach China A.D. 1609.

The twentieth-century mind is chilled at the realisation that on his first voyage in search of a North-West Passage—made in 1607 on behalf of the Muscovy Company—Henry Hudson was accompanied by only ten men and a boy.

After a second voyage for the Muscovy Company he was in 1609 commissioned by the Dutch East India Company to make a further exploration, and on this occasion he took his Half Moon 150 miles up the Hudson River.

He made his last, tragic voyage in the following year, in the Discovery, of London. This attempt ended in mutiny soon after Discovery had broken free from the ice in Hudson Bay; Hudson, with his son and seven others, was cast adrift in an open boat, and was not seen again.
