IRON HORSE

Barry and Audrey Sterling had searched for a winery site in Europe for seven years. Upon their return to the United States, they resumed their quest in Sonoma County. The Sterlings quickly recognized the potential of the Iron Horse property. As the former Vineyard Manager, Forrest Tancer, took them around the property, they also instantly appreciated his viticultural knowledge, his dedication to the land and his desire to see Iron Horse developed into a premier California vineyard. Within a few weeks in early 1976, the purchase of Iron Horse was made and Forrest agreed to continue as Vineyard Manager.

The unique location of Iron Horse in Sonoma County-Green Valley, sixty-five miles north of San Francisco and ten miles from the Pacific coast, provides sunny days with fog-cooled nights and mornings, the ideal long growing season for Chardonnay and Pinot Noir.

Laurence Sterling is the son of Barry and Audrey. He and his sister Joy, manage the winery activities today. Their parents and Forrest continue to live on their land giving daily care and attention to their vineyards, thus assuring consistency and high quality wines.
