PRINCE JONAH KUHIO KALANIANAOLE
(1871-1922)

Prince Kuhio was the great-grandson of King Kaumualii, last reigning monarch of Kauai. He was the second son of High Chief David Kahalepouli Piikoi and Princess Kinoike Kekaulike. He had an older brother David Kawanakoa, and a younger brother Keliiahonui, who died in childhood.

Kuhio and David were nephews of Queen Kapiolani, the wife of King Kalakaua, and were created Princes by royal proclamation at the coronation of Kalakaua and Kapiolani, by right of being Kapiolani's relatives.

Both brothers were educated in Honolulu, California, and England. At one point in history, Prince Kuhio was imprisoned because he tried to re-establish the old monarchial ways in Hawaii. He later became head of the Republican Party and in 1902 was chosen as the first delegate to the U.S. Congress. He served as Delegate until his death in 1922, and is best remembered for getting Congress to enact the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, which provided homesteading for the rehabilitation of Hawaiians. Prince Kuhio also founded the Hawaiian Civic Club, a large Hawaiian organization which takes an active part in the civic life of the community. His memory is revered by the Hawaiians who celebrate his birthday annually.

Aunt Jennie Wilson says that his nickname "Prince Cupid" came from his jolly nature. Historian Clarice B. Taylor says it stems from an anecdote of school days at St. Albans Episcopal School in Pauoa Valley. French instructor Pierre Jones said Kuhio looked like a cherub and thereafter he would call him "Cupid". His schoolmates then took up the name.

Probably the most popular and accepted story is that when Kuhio was Delegate to Congress, his haole colleagues found "Cupid" much easier to pronounce than his actual surname Kalanianaole, so they continued the nickname, however, only the family and his intimate friends addressed him directly as "Cupid".

Prince Kuhio's Restaurant is a tribute to this great Hawaiian gentleman.
